LEARNING OUTCOMES

Discuss the best practices that can be implemented within the role of a non-executive director.

Provide practical tips on how to be a world-class non-executive director.

Select appropriate tools to better understand corporate governance and how to apply these within an effective non-executive role.

If you aspire to be a non-executive director (NED) or are currently holding the position, it is important to know what the role entails and ensure you have the right mindset and competencies to contribute positively.

The Asian market has some of the most robust governance principles in the world. It also offers some unparalleled opportunities for the right candidates. Remuneration in the finance and IT space for NEDs is also amongst some of the highest. However, with greatness comes risk and responsibility. Therefore, it is essential to know how to assess the opportunities and be clear that you have the appropriate skillset to deliver at world class standards.

Target Audience

This programme is for you if you are seeking the first non-executive director role or an existing director who wants to build further on that experience to improve performance. It is also suitable for experienced directors or shareholders who are looking to strengthen their board with a non-executive support. This programme allows them to better understand what skills and qualities are needed for people in that role.
